

ABOUT MCGILL INDUSTRIAL RELATION'S ASSOCIATION:

MIRA is an organization that was founded in order to promote and improve the Industrial Relations program and its student body at McGill University. We strive to facilitate the process of making every student's voice in the program heard, and act as both a support system and channel of communication between them and AUS more broadly. The organization focuses on educating our students on the importance of bringing peace, positive growth, and social harmony to the workplace. We aim to achieve this goal through organizing various events and providing a platform by which students can find out and share information as well as express their ideas. Additionally, we ultimately hope to foster a community where students within the program are able to build lasting relations among each other.

MIRA'S GOALS THIS YEAR:

- Increase social engagement of IR students with the social events that we organize
- Ensure the provision of academic resources to support the success of Industrial Relations students in program courses.
- Plan a successful ILO Conference in the tradition of previous MIRA Executive Councils.
- Participate in the planning and activities of CERI, an inter-university Industrial Relations case competition in the greater Montreal Area.
